a) Copy of letter from De Lacy Evans to Military Secretary, Horseguards, 3rd. April, 1855. The Commander of the 2nd. Division testifies that Pitt-Rivers who was Deputy Assistant QMG acted as Assistant QMG in the place of his superior, Lt/Col. Herbert, when he was ill in Bulgaria and wounded at the Alma. He would be suitable to hold Assistant rather than Deputy Assistant's post in Malta.

The original of this letter is at Hinton St. Mary, see Appendix II, nos. 38-40.

... c) Copy of long letter (5 pp.) from Hon. Sir James Lindsay, Colonel Commanding Grenadier Guards, to Sir James Scarlett, Adjutant-General, dated-February, 1861. The letter is concerned with the criticisms made by Hay in A1b and says that Pitt-Rivers had not been actuated by opposition to a senior office in his protests. The gist of his case was that the method of training had not been devised by Pitt-Rivers but had been carried out on the orders of the Commander in Malta, Sir John Pennefather, who is quoted to this effect. For fuller details see nos. 38-46, 51-58 in Appendix II.
This explanation was evidently accepted since his name seems to have cleared. Worry over the Inquiry into this matter had caused his wife to become seriously ill in December, 1860 9b. and P. Russell (ed.) The Amberley Papers..(London, 1937), 1, 107-08.) Although the precise nature of Pitt-Rivers' assignment in Canada in December 1861 is not clear it was evidently related to the musketry training, and is an indication of his re- instatement.

Both were convicted, Darragh being sentenced to death and Butler to penal servitude for life. Darragh was transported to Australia from where he subsequently escaped on the American whaler Catalpa, while in Butler's case the sentence may have been quashed (cf. WO/81/114, p.11.)

Notes: Unfinished letter which deserves quotation: "I have read with much interest the paper which you have addressed to the members of the Anthropological Society upon the Irish Government difficulty considered as a question of race. During three years ending in - it happened to be part of my duty as Assistant General in the Southern division of Ireland to investigate and report to the military authorities upon matters relating to the spread of Fenianism in that part of the country which I took in the anthropological view of the question... I may say briefly thus. I have arrived at the conclusion that Fenianism must be regarded as a war of races indeed. I fail to discern any other sufficient causes for the chronic disaffection of Ireland. There is I think in the present empirical condition of the art of Government an undue tendency to attribute to political causes questions the solutions of which must be sought for in the social, ethnical and psychological [sic] condition of the people to be governed..." The paper referred to could be that by J. Gould Avery (Journ. Anth. Soc. London, VII (1869), CCXXI-XXVII), but the spirit is much more akin to that by J.W. Jackson, The Race Question in Ireland (Anth. Review VII (1869) 154-76). Fenianism has caused much discussion of this subject.

Notes: A single sheet written all over from both ends, on both sides and along the edges. Scarcely legible but the beginning of the original draft can be made out: 'I have the honour to request you will have the honour to lay before His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commander in Chief my application to be allowed to retire upon half pay'.

The second paragraph is less clear; '... I do not make this application on the ? of health but a previously from having purchased all my steps... I cannot afford to List (?) so large a sum as £800...'

Pitt-Rivers purchased his Colonelcy on 22nd January 1867 and went on the half pay on the 6th. July in the same year (he was 40 years old). The interest of the draft is that it reveals that he went on half-pay not because he had to but at his own request. On half-pay his time was entirely his own to pursue his professional interests. He returned to military duties in 1837.

The labour employed consisted of labourers and Army sappers under a Corporal. The Journal concludes: 'Thus concluded the operations in Caesar's Camp which had taken 16 days in all... 10 to 12 men having been employed ... tho' it cannot be said that all means of research are exhausted... the results obtained are sufficient to justify confident opinion being passed as to the age and character of the fortress.'

52 pp., fair copy but heavily scored and corrected. A note in pencil by Pitt-Rivers reads 'The parts ruled through were not read, the diagrams were enlarged.' Figures from his article in Quat. Journ. Geol. Soc. XXVIII (1872) pp. 449-66 on the Thames terraces have been pasted on a final sheet. At the top Pitt-Rivers has written 'Lecture delivered Feb. 2, 1875 in the Whitechapel Foundation School to an audience composed partly of the members of the literary and scientific society there and partly of tradesmen and working classes of the neighbourhood.'

This lecture which covered a wide range of topics from the antiquity of man through various aspects of material culture was apparently never published.

J Bor deals with whether the remains on Woodcuts Common are British or Roman. The excavations at Woodcuts were then drawing to a close and Pitt-Rivers may have been puzzled by the results. The map here reduced from a large one, preserved at Rushmore, appears to have been made in the same year, but is probably the original map made for the Court of the Exchequer. It is on thin paper, pasted together in small pieces, and appears to have been transferred to canvas in recent times.' Only very slight corrections but the footnotes on the second page have T. W. Smart written in ink after them, apparently autograph signature. This constitutes p. ii-v of King John's House that formed a sort of introduction to the main text of P80.

They are headed Spear - America, Spear - Europe, Club - Africa etc. They deal with bows and arrows, axes, clubs, slings, spears, scramsaxes, feather arrows. The composite bow and plain bow have separate sections. The notes are based on written sources, not on his own collection and it seems likely therefore that this spate of reading was made necessary by the work on the catalogue of P110 (Cf. P67, P67a.)

The strips appear to have been stuck on to paper and were perhaps hung up as a reference to shelves or cupboards for the collection. This suggestion is lent some weight by instance which have 'Transferred' written against them with an altered number.

Notes: 102 receipts from the South Kensington Museum, 1st. January, 1874 to 29th. July, 1884, recording the loan of around 3,000 items. The distribution over the period is uneven and there are no receipts from 1883. Included among the receipts are lists by Pitt-Rivers:

42 items taken to South Kensington 9 July 1877

69 items taken to South Kensington 2 July 1879

7 items sent to South Kensington 21 July 1879

28 and 8 items sent from Clermont Ferrand (Acknowledged [sic] by the Museum) 7 September 1880.

The loan was made originally in 1874 for exhibition at Bethnal Green (transferred to S. Kensington in 1878), but continuous additions were made to it. These did not derive from existing collections but were at least partly fresh purchases since the objects arrived from as far afield as Copenhagen, Calcutta and France. It was a curious situation in which a growling private collection was maintained by a national Museum; it is no cause for surprise that the museum authorities felt some concern in the matter.

As no catalogue exists at Oxford the receipts probably provide the best clue as to the original collection received by that University. Although intermingled with the other papers in 175 each receipt is marked with a date and had evidently been carefully kept up to 1900, but there may have been subsequent losses.

He contended that the Government view that the proper place for an Ethnological Collection was within the Ethnological Department of a museum like the British Museum and that it was out of place in the S. Kensington Museum was misleading, as his collection was in no sense ethnological: it was a museum of primitive arts designed to show their development. Reference to the original letter of Pitt-Rivers shows that he himself called it an Ethnological Collection when he made the offer to the nation.

Notes: Folder entitled 'For Address, Authors Inst. Anniversary Meeting, January 1883'. Inside several pages of rough notes (? reviews). Two rough drafts entitled 'From mother right to Father right by A. W Howitt and Rev. L. Fison'. Text starts 'assuming the condition of primeval man to have resembled that of other animals promiscuity must have been a normal relation between the sexes...'
There are two other rough drafts entitled 'Notes on the Nafio Indians in the oriental province of Ecuador.' and 'E. C. Hore on the twelve tribes of Tanganyika'.

Notes: 36 pp. of rough notes headed 'Monuments which show traces of Christian Symbolism, Romilly Allen.'

During his visits to Scotland Pitt-Rivers had become interested in Celtic crosses, Pictish symbols etc., a number of which he had had modelled (see Proc. Soc. Ant. London XIII (1890), pp. 174-81) and hence the copious reading he felt necessary (his early interest in Ogham inscriptions may be recalled, P1-10.)

Other comments: J.) Romily Allen had common interest with Pitt-Rivers in locks (see entries under Romily Allen in General Letter section, and P59.) His monumental 'The Early Christian Monuments of Scotland' (Edinburgh, 1903) did not appear until after the death of Pitt-Rivers, but he had written other works on them and in any case Pitt-Rivers may have been furnished with a draft.

Notes: A rough draft (8 pp. quarto) and a fair copy (6 pp. fool- scap) with considerable alteration of wording. Neither is in the hand of Pitt-Rivers: the first writer (153) was clearly a foreigner, possibly a Chinese who translated the text, and the second an English- speaking scribe who improved the English (154). It describes 14 tribes of non Chinese people living in China.

Professor Williamson Watson kindly writes (letter 7 April 1975):
"The Chinese text on which it is based (if there is a particular text) looks more like something Ming or Ching date (it might be from the Ch'ien-lung encyclopedia [sic]) than anything earlier. Descriptions of no-Han inhabitants of southern China occur from Ssu-ma Ch'ian onwards, i.e. from the early Han period.'

The writing is possibly that of Pitt-Rivers but it is possible that this is a stray from the Smart collection. If it is by Pitt-Rivers it must represent a very early interest in ethnology.

The surveys are carefully done and the lettering although freehand is largely in capitals. This makes it difficult to identify the handwriting with certainty. There is no record of Pitt-Rivers ever having worked in Cornwall, but taking into account the methodical nature of the surveys the attribution to him or his assistant seem possible. Pitt-Rivers was invited to St. Just (L1017, 78) and another correspondent, S. Baring Gould, excavated in Cornwall.

Notes: .... 2) 8 September 1888 with copy of reply; 10 September 1888, two notes. In his address to the British Association at Bath in 1888 (cf. P97) Pitt-Rivers had said that all the owners of monuments in the Schedule were unwilling at first to put them under the provisions of the Act. The Inspector was placed in a very embarrassing position until the spell was broken by Sir Herbert Maxwell. Clearly this was a serious reflection on Lubbock, an owner himself, who had been responsible for the pressure that led to the Act. Pitt-Rivers perhaps had the better of the argument but in fairness to Lubbock the motives for his action may have been not so much a fear of the depreciation of the value of the land as resentment against the weakness of the Government Bill compare to his own.

Notes: OW5, Treasury- Establishment, War Office and General Pitt-Rivers, 37 sheets of copied letters and minutes relating to drawing Retired Pay whilst Inspector of Ancient Monuments. A long series of minutes on this matter. According to the Secretary (23 July 1888) Pitt-Rivers had received his salary since 1 January 1883: 'a salary of £250 per. an. with his actual (?) expences [sic] of locomotion and an allowance for personal expences [sic] of £1 for every night of absence from home.' Probably this dispute influenced Pitt-Rivers when he relinquished the salary in 1890. The papers throw a great deal of light on the Inspectorship, it was evidently intended to be part time, and Ireland was not included since it had an Inspector already of its own.

These are the most striking of many testimonials to the enjoyment of visitors of the amenities in the Larmer Grounds. The most charming and discerning account is the long letter from an anonymous author, 'One of the Crowd.'

Notes: a pp. foolscap. Draft of speech to Handley branch of Primrose League. 'Having been asked to take the Presidency of the Handley branch of the Primrose League I wish briefly to state my views for doing so...'
'I confess that I am not enamoured of political life at the present time, it never was at a lower ebb than now. So long as party was subservient to political principle government went on well enough but of late principle on both sides has been made entirely subservient to party interests and I believe the country will be ruined if it goes on much longer.
'As I am addressing conservatives I will speak of the shortcomings of conservatives in this respect. We all know what scoundrels our opponents are but we are not always impressed with the fact that we are great humbugs ourselves. The proper function of Conservatives is conservatism. How are we performing that function?
'The progress of the world is regulated and properly so by antagonisms as Darwin, Huxley, Herbert Spencer and just recently Sir William Grove had impressed upon us. This is an age of science and we should listen to the voice of scientific men; they are our instructors. They see the affairs of the world from a higher standpoint than political men who are merely wire pullers and self interested partisans. The proper function of conservatism is to serve as check upon violent changes....'

But this in human life is not because the struggle is really greater between the nearest of kin but because it is more constant and more apparent. Other comments: f) Drawing game.

This was evidently a game, the object being to see how the subject of the drawing fared after it had passed through the hands of all the draughtsmen and draughtswomen. In view of the interest of Pitt-Rivers in drawing, as shown in the Inspector's notebooks, this enthusiasm for the same subject by his family is noteworthy.

The initials can be identified as follows: No. 9, Tomkin, No. 8 Alice Margaret Pitt-Rivers, the General's wife, Nos. 1, 3, 5, 6, 7 (married daughter) children of Pitt-Rivers and Nos. 2 and 2 the Misses Lane-Fox, his wards (M40).

S&SWM Pitt-Rivers papers Letter series

B387

Accession Number: B387

No. of sheets: Unknown

Date: 1885-1886

Correspondent: Phillip Webb, Architect

Notes: 10 letters concerned with design of new entry to Chase and cottage (? N. Lodge) and problems in fireplace at Rushmore.

Other comments:

Accession Number: B388

No. of sheets: Unknown

Date: 1862-1870

Correspondent:

Notes: Bank- book, 58 pp., 4 x 6 in., inscribed 'Lt. Col. Augustus Lane Fox. Grenadier Guards, Cork, with Messrs Cox & Co.' (cox & Co., Craig's Court) on the outside, and on the inside '6 Montemotte' crossed out and replaced by '10 Upper Phillimore Gardens, Kensington W.' Left-hand page records withdrawals from, and right-hand page payments into account.

The book which covers almost the whole period that Pitt-Rivers was stationed in Ireland and half the time he was on half-pay gives a very interesting picture of his financial position before he inherited the Rivers fortune.

Notes: ... Over a period of many months in 1869 Pitt-Rivers went daily from his home in Holland Park to visit exposures of gravel in the Thames terraces near Acton, mainly west of Acton Central Station. The results were published in Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society XXVIII (1872) pp. 449 - 66. The interest of this roll is that not only are the sections on a much larger scale than the published ones as well as being coloured, but furthermore the implements themselves are illustrated.

After his promotion to Major-General in 1877 Pitt-Rivers was possibly concerned with intelligence at QMG's Department at War Office. As a large reinforcement contingent was sent out early in the year to Zululand, the fighting then being at its height, the need for the map is self-evident. Curiously this roll is erroneously marked on outside 'Map of Eranice', presumably by a careless assistant.

'Classification of Genl. Pitt-Rivers Personal Accounts for Years 1893 ' respectively. The first volume has been cut down the right hand margin for finger reference to the various headings in the accounts.

The accounts appear to be written entirely in the hand of Pitt-Rivers himself (they are written in the first - person) until July, 1899 when he was probably too ill to continue and another hand, possibly that of the eldest son, continued beyond the General's death up to 1901, but the entries are increasingly confused and laconic.

Although the date on the spine of the first volume for the beginning of the accounts is 1885 the four previous years 1881-1884, are summarised in columns at the beginning of the volumes - from 1885 several pages are devoted to each heading on which the expenditure is itemised. As the items are arranged alphabetically it is clear that either they were copied from a draft or most likely the bills were arranged in order, or possibly some kind of card index was used.....

Notes: .... The 26 headings for 1881 which are give below did not remain constant throughout the period; the Roman numerals applied to the headings altered in the later years. Some headings were dropped while occasionally new ones were introduced. Nevertheless the broad pattern was similar throughout. The main outlay was on Items I, House and Household Expenditure, II, Furniture and Art Object Bought, and XI, Children. Some headings like IX, Road making had been put in in early years when estate costs had been included and were then retained year after year with no entry.

Apart from giving the distribution of expenditure the particular headings contain matter of great interest for the scholar. For example the wages of staff are set out in I while in II objects are now in modern collections identified. The Doctor's expenses in XIII give a good idea of the General's Health each year...

The wages of the 'Clerks' were included under this heading and in later years the wages of the labourers on the sites. Other headings of especial interest were Journeys and Expenses during Journeys (X) and Books and Maps (XVII).

1. Letters at Hinton

Accession Number: 1. Letters at Hinton St. Mary

No. of sheets: Unknown

Date: 20 January 1853

Correspondent: Pitt-Rivers, Augustus Henry Lane Fox

Notes: 1. Copy from the Register of Baptisms at Sturminster Newton church, Dorset, of the entry recording the baptism of Pitt-Rivers on 29 January 1828. The copy which appears to be in the hand of Pitt-Rivers himself is certified by his uncle, The Rev. T. H. Lane Fox, the incumbent of Sturminster Newton who performed the baptism, and is dated 20 January 1853. Pitt-Rivers was born in Yorkshire in 1827 but was baptised in Dorset when he was nine months old. He was married in London a few days after this copy was made, an impending event that may have made him feel that such a document was necessary.

Possibly it is a copy of an original written just after the event. The text starts at P.3 and reads as follows:

'... of the 1st and 2nd. light divisions on our left flank.- piAt last after about half an hour, the Enemy's Fire began to slacken in one direction and we found that it was directed upon the left light division which had crossed the river to our left just under a field work which contained a number of heavy guns in position - Our division now advanced across the rive and as you may imagine, the assembled in a regular Mob on the other side, fortunately there was cover for them to form under- The Guards followed the light divisions and formed under fire - the 23rd. Fusiliers were driven down into the river and the Centre part of the light Division were obliged to give way- I saw the Grenadiers advancing in the most perfect line you ever saw in Hyde Park. The pushed on together with the Coldstream and Fusilliers, without firing a shot, right under the tremendous Battery of heavy pieces. The Grenadiers remained firm throughout. They took the redoubt Battery capturing one Gun-

'The French by this time had captured the Heights on our right and opened a fire of artillery across our front - The 2nd. Division Batteries advanced on the Bridge and opened upon the retreating Russian Columns. The rout was complete and they retires across their second line of hills in Complete Confusion.....

'Just about this time we saw a heavy Column in a ravine on the heights beyond, and for about ten minutes we were doubtful whether they were French or Russians, at last we found they were Russians and began to open our five (fire?) Batteries upon them, Had we done so at first we sd. [sic] have handled them fearfully. The whole then pushed up the heights and the Enemy retreated - we bivouacked that night upon the heights.

'Our men behaved manfully and their gallantry is only equalled by their humanity after battle - I was surprised having heard of me committing all sorts of horrors, to see them just after the excitement of Battle talking so moderately and so attentive to the wounded Russians, who did not understand it - Many of the wounded men raised themselves up and shot out men in the backs after they had passed them -.....

Date: 14 April 1896

Correspondent: Wilkinson, A.

Notes: 86. Diagnosis by A. Wilkinson DM., F. R. C. S. E. of Shaftesbury of the condition of Pitt-Rivers on 14 April 1896.

'Genl. Pitt-Rivers has been suffering from diabetes for the last fifteen years. altho' from time to time it has varied in severity, the system and functions have suffered to a considerable extent, the spinal system markedly so. Besides within the last four years the period mentioned he has had four severe attacks of bronchitis which have left their mark on the pulmonary structures - the circulatory system too has not escaped, his heart being weak.

I therefore give it as my opinion that he is not justified in attempting to exercise any physical or mental strain.' Cf. M1 -23.
